Men with older brothers

By the Staff

A study by researchers at the University of California, San Diego, has found that men with older brothers are more likely to be violent than men without older brothers.

The study, which was published in the journal Psychological Science, found that men with older brothers are more likely to be violent than men without older brothers. The study also found that the effect was stronger for men who had older brothers who were violent themselves.

The researchers suggest that the effect may be due to the fact that men with older brothers are more likely to be exposed to violence in their homes. They also suggest that the effect may be due to the fact that men with older brothers are more likely to be influenced by their older brothers.

Figure 1 is a schematic representation of the experimental design. It shows a flow from 'Stimulus' to 'Response' and 'Reaction time'. The 'Stimulus' box contains '1000 ms' and '1000 ms'. The 'Response' box contains '1000 ms' and '1000 ms'. The 'Reaction time' box contains '1000 ms' and '1000 ms'. The flow is indicated by arrows and labels like 'Stimulus', 'Response', and 'Reaction time'.

Israel launches Gaza rescue assault

TEL AVIV, June 12 (AP) — Israel's army launched a ground assault on Gaza Tuesday, aiming to destroy Hamas' military infrastructure and rescue hostages held by the militant group.

The assault, which began at dawn, was the first large-scale ground operation since Israel's 2002 disengagement from Gaza. It followed a series of rocket attacks from Gaza and a Hamas attack on an Israeli bus in the West Bank last week.

Israel's Defense Ministry said the army was targeting Hamas' training camps and weapons depots. The ministry also said that Israeli soldiers had rescued several hostages from Gaza.

An explosion is seen in Gaza Tuesday, June 15, 2004, as Israel's army launched a ground assault on the Gaza Strip.
